

Halflings

Halflings are a diminutive race, typically standing between two to four feet tall. Their rounded faces are often adorned with wide, friendly smiles, and their large, expressive eyes shimmer with curiosity and mischief. Most halflings possess curly hair, ranging from golden blond to rich chestnut, and their skin is usually fair, weathered by their time spent outdoors. Halflings value community and kinship above all else.

They are known for their strong familial bonds and their ability to create tight-knit communities, often living in small villages nestled in lush valleys or alongside fertile riverbanks. Their homes are typically cozy and welcoming, filled with the warm scent of baking bread and the laughter of children.
